The body of Jennie H. Almy, who killed herself and shot Victor Crofton Andre at the fifty-ninth street station of the Third avenue elevated road on Tuesday morning, lay in an indertaker's shop at 1,058 Third avenue yesterday. Only the face could be seen. It was il-luminated by a gas jet overhead. People came in from the streets by twos and threes, and looked at it. A bunch of lilles of the valley rested on the cover of the box. It had been placed there by a woman, who said she was a friend. In the evening a crowd gathered in front of the shop and marched in single file around the ice box in which the body lay. Many small children were in the throng. The undertaker said that he did not wish to make the people angry by refusing to allow them to see the body. It was said that the interment would be in Woodlawn, where Miss Almy's mother is buried. Capt. Gunner said that he had requested an Episcopal minister to read the funeral service.

The Captain went to Miss Almy's room yeslerday afternoon. It is a large room on the third floor, front, and is nicely furnished. There were eight trunks and a wardrobe full of clothing. The contents were not examined. and instructions were given that nothing should be disturbed.

André was put under the influence of morphine on Tuesday night, and he slept a little. He was very weak, but in the morning was doing fairly. He had recovered from the shock. and the internal hemorrhage had ceased. Mr. Ashley Cole, the private secretary of Mr. Rufus Hatch, and Mr. Nahan Franko, the violinist, Histen, and Mr. Nahan Franko, the violinist, who is an infilmate friend, were allowed to see him. Mr. Cole said that Mr. Hatch was mistaken in saying that he did not know André. The name had slipped his memory, but on reflection he remembered that André had brought good recommendations to him, and had called several times at his house, Mr. Hatch was anxious to do anything in his power for André.

power for André.

To Mr. Franko Andrésald that he had not betrayed Miss Almy, and that he had not left her because of her divorce, but because he had learned that her reputation had been bad. He said that he believed she must have been crazy when she shot him. He expressed no sorrow for her death. He felt very hopeful of his own recovery. A cable message was sent to André's parents at Wiesbaden, Gormany, telling them that he had been wounded. An answer came asking for more particulars. A despatch was then sent to his mother, telling her to come on at once, as André would probably die. There is little chance of her arriving here in time to see him alive.

André has not eaten anything since he was shot. At 30'clock yesterday afternoon the internal hemorrhage came on again, and he woulted venous blood. The bullet was extracted. It was found just under the skin. His condition was much worse last evening, and herowas a consultation of the hospital surgeons. They said that he would probably live through the night, but that he could not live longer than a day or two. His danger is from peritonitis, or from exhaustion by loss of blood. Inquired as to his condition. She was known there as "Crazy Jane." Mrs. Almy, whose daughter she was supposed to be, had in reality adapted her. She found Janule, then a baby, in a basket at Leroy and Hudson streets, in this city. She passed her as her own child, only revealing her real history to Charles Johnson, a grocer of Williams-bridge, and John Davis, a game constable and sporting man, whom she afterward married, without however, being known there power for André.

Jonnie was very violent when a girl. In her thirteenth year, her neighbors say, she became subject to fits of insanity, brought on by epilepsy. Mr. Davis, her stepfather, says that in her moments of violence it took ail the strength of three or four men to prevent her from injuring herself or others. A number of people who knew her well said it was strange she had not killed any one before, as she used to be subject to fits of passion, during which no one dared remain in the house with her. Dr. Grum of Williamsbridge and Dr. Moulton of New Rochelle, who attended her, said she yould be subject all her life to fits of insanity; and when John Pavis last saw her, three years ago, she told him she had never recovered from her early trouble. She was in an insane asylum for several months.

When only 14 years old she was married to Peter Schwartz, then a brakeman on the Harlam Railrond. He was only 18 years of age. They lived together two years, and then Schwartz left her, the neighbors say on account of her notoriously irregular conduct. He can to this city and was employed as a cenductor on the Third avenue horse cars until last summer, when he was engaged as a driver in Barnum's show. Shortly after this her mother married Mr. Davis; and not being able to agree with her steprinher. Jennie left Williamsbridge and came to New York. Since then, and for the last six years, her history is imperfectly known. She was known to have lived with a young man in Philadelphia as his wife, and was afterward seen by a telegraph operator at Williamsbridge in a house of questionable repute in Forty-fourth attents.

Mrs. Almy separated from Mr. Davis after having lived with him for three years, during which time they kept a public house at Washingtonville, Westchester. She then married James Jimison of Williamsbridge, She died not long afterward. Of Jennie's two stepsisters one married John Goddes, a labering man of Williamsbridge, and the other, Ella H. Davis, Is years old, was adopted by a family living in South Brooklyn, and is now at school in Northampton, Mass.

The man with whom Jennie is said to have lived in Philadelphia was the son of a college professor in this city. He really loved the girl, and induced her father to put her at a boarding school, which is now said to have been Mount Holyoke Seminary, in Massachusetts. He had changed his mind about marrying her when she graduated. The training and influence of the school worked a reformation in Jennie, as her life after that time seems to lave been blameless until she met André. She brought the best recommendations to Miss Long, with whom she boarded in Twenty-fourth street, and the people with whom she lived afterward speak in the highest terms of her medesty and good conduct. Three years ago she procured a divorce from Schwartz on the ground of his infidelity. She kept the divorce papers in her room. There is no record of this divorce paters in the New York courts. Miss Long says that hadre knew all about this divorce as Miss Almy had shown him the divorce raof this divorce in the New York courts. Also Long says that André knew all about this divorce as Miss Aimy had shown him the divorce par-pers before they became engaged. She said that she did this in order that he might not bring it up against her afterward. There are letters in Miss Aimy's room which will prove

Miss Long says that on Sunday, Jan. 29, they made another arrangement to get married. André said he would come at 4 o clock on the following day, and that Miss Long could go with them to witness the ceremony. He said he was in honor bound to marry her, and that they could keep it seerst until the spring. He did not keep his engagement, and Miss Almy become deeply decressed. She did not see him again until Feb. 3, when he called, made some explanation, and took her to dinner at the Union Square Hotel. The next day he took her to the Gallmeyer memorial services at the Thalia Theatre. After that he remained away again, and she, hearing that he was attentive to Miss Beckel, wrote to him and asked him to announce his intended marriage to the Beckels. He replied and said that it was too soon for them to marry, and that it was bert to wait until he could earn more money. The letter began, "My Dearest Jennie," and was signed, "With fondest love, Vic." After that she was unable to see him or to get an answer to her letters. She expected a letter from him last Monday and when it did not come the disappointment seems to have made her Insane.

The Protous Court of Inquiry Points Out

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 .- The report of the Proteus Court of Inquiry was transmitted by the President to the Senate to-day. It em-bodies an elaborate digest of the testimony taken by the court. The findings of the court are summarized as follows:

The court has already pronounced the opinon that Lieut, Garlington, after the sinking of the Protous, erred in not waiting longer at Pandora harbor with the object of obtaining from the Yantic supplies with which to make a depot for a winter station at Life Boat Point or Littleton Island, Lieut. Garlington's error in this respect is regarded as one of judgment, committed in the exercise of a difficult and unusual discretion, for which, in the opinion of the court he should not be held to further accountability.

While awarding credit to Gen. Hazen, the Chief Signal Officer of the army, for the best intentions, the court is of opinion that in many particulars and in some of the gravest mo ment, he failed in an adequate comprehension of the necessities of the case, and of the measures and means expended to meet them.

The following grave errors and omissions are not submitting in the fall of 1882 to the Secretary of War for the action of Congress a sufficient plan, with corresponding estimates, for the organization and equipment of a complete and efficient relief expedition.

A DEBATE ON FINANCE.

The Senate Devotes a Day to Mr. McPher-son's National Bank Note Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 .- Mr. McPherson's oint resolution limiting the amount of money to be expended for the Greely relief expedition to $500,000, was reported unfavorably from the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs to-day. Mr. McPherson said now was a good time to settle the question. He had information that $500 000 would be amply sufficient. By a vote of 27 to 26 the resolution was postponed.

Mr. Voorhees offered a resolution, which went over until to-morrow, directing the Secretary of the Interior to withhold for the present his approval of patents or certificates for lands selected by the Northern Pacific Railroad in lieu of others said to have been lost to said company under the act of July 1864. A pre-amble to the resolution sets forth that the rights of settlers might be injuriously affected by such approval.

rights of settlers might be injuriously affected by such approval.

The succiai order was Mr. McPherson's bill previding that upon a deposit of any United States bonds bearing interest in the manner required by law, any national banking association making the same shall be entitled to receive from the Comptroller of the Currency circulating notes of different denominations, in blank registered and countersigned as provided by law, not exceeding in amount the par value of the bonds deposited; provided that at no time shall the total amount of such notes issued to any such association exceed the amount atsuch time actually paid in of its capital stock.

Mr. Sherman offered an amendment providing that if any of the bonds deposited should bear a rate of annual interest higher than 3 per cent, additional circulating notes should be issued, equal in amount to one-half the interest accraing on such bonds before their maturity, in excess of 3 per cent, per annum such amount to be ascertained and stated by the Comptroller of the Currency on the first day of July of each year hereafter.

Messrs, Bayard, McPherson, and Sherman spock, and the subject went over.

The House spont nearly the entire day in debate on the Mississippi contested election case of Chalmers against Manning. The majority of the Committee on Elections had reperted that on the prima facte case neither of the contestants was entitled to the seat. At the end of the debate the matter went over.

Mr. Warner of Ohlo wished toknow why the joint resolution passed by both Houses on Monday for the Relief of the Ohio flood sufferers was not sent to the President of the Sentator his signature until late yesterday afternoon, and he presented a resolution instructing the Committee on Enrolled Bills to find out the cause of the delay. Mr. Hatch objecting to immediate submission of the resolution, it was referred.

WHY ADAMS RAN AWAY.

ACCUSED OF RETAINING $6,000 OF HIS

The Discovery of his Rogus Divorce Trans-nctions Made After his Disappearant The Reason be was Not Disharred. The sudden disappearance of Muro Adams, the supposed lawyer, from his office at 234 Broadway several days ago, appears to have been due, not to the expectation of the ex-posure of his vast business in fraudulent divorces, but to a warrant for his arrest on an entirely different charge, which was in the hands of detectives. About ten days ago William B. Bliey of Greenpoint went before Justice Duffy in the Tombs, and made complaint that Adams had appropriated and disappeared with $5,000, which he had collected in a divorce suit in which he had been employed as counsel for Riley. Justice Duffy issued a warrant; and placed it in the hands of Central Office detectives. They are still looking for Adams, alias Clarke, alias Hardie. Rufus F. Andrews of 171 Broadway was counsel for Mrs. Jane Riley in a suit against her husband for divorce.

"Mrs. Riley lives with her son, Henry J., a shoe dealer at 106 Norman avenue, Greenpoint," Mr. Andrews said yesterday. brought suit against her husband on the ground of adultery. She alleged that he had deserted her, and had gone away with the wife of another gentleman living in the neighborhood. There had been some negotiations beween herself and her husband with regard to of another gentleman living in the neighborhood. There had been some negotiations between herself and her husband with regard to a financial settlement before I came into the case. The house in which they had lived belonged to him, and he was desirous of settling something on her in lieu of alimony. The understanding had been arrived at that he was to deed the house to his wife and turn over the shoe store and business to his sen. I prepared a summons and complaint, and Mrs. Reilly said she wished to consult also Mr. Perry, a lawyer over there, who had been her friend and adviser. I consulted with him, left the papers for her further consideration, and she afterward came to my office with them.

"Subsequently I was requested to meet her, her two sons, Mr. Perry, and Mr. Riley, the defendant, at the office of Munro Adams, defendant is counsel, at 231 Broadway. We met there, and the whole subject was talked over. I supposed Adams to be a reputable lawyer, and I had been his counsel in several suits not concerning divorce matters. The divorce was not then discussed, but the proposed agreements between Mr. Riley and the members of his family. With these agreements I had nothing winatever todo. I was neither a party nor a witness, nor did I draft them. It was simply their own arrangement, in order to avoid discussion in court concerning alimony and to provent notoriety.

"A short time afterward I understood that Mr. Law, a Clerk of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, had been appointed referce, that he had notified the parties to appear before him, that they had done so, and that the proofs had been taken. I was not requested to be present by the plaintiff, and supposed she had intrusted the matter to Mr. Perry, Mr. Riley, the defendant, called done so and that the proofs had been taken. I was not requested to be present by the plaintiff, and supposed she had intrusted the matter to Mr. Perry, Mr. Riley, the defendant, called on ma subsequently, and complained that his counsel Adams had, under the arrangement made with h me, and told me they had paid money to Adams for pretended services in getting divorces."

Nicholas Quackenbos is the lawyer at 7 Warren street who was retained by clergymon of the Episcopal Church to bring charges against the Rev. R. Hober Newton looking to expulsion from the clergy.

I suppose, "said he yesterday, "that the public has no island the number of fraudulent divorcess which were issued from the office of Munro Adams. I am satisfied there are thousands of them scattered all over the country, and the fact that many of these people have innocently married again and have children by these marriages is a very painful feature of the affair. Of course, the parties to these contracts are not married before the law, and their children are illegitimate. An outline of a case in which I came into contact with Adams may be interesting.

"Walter H. Chase, the son of a Baptist clergy-man in Maine, is now serving a term of three years in State prison for bigamy. He was one of Adams's cilents, and received one of his begus divorces. Chase was a man of good education and fine manners, whose appearance gained him confidence from everybody. He married a lady in Bahavia, by whom he had two children. Then he procured an aligned divorce through Adams, and subsequently married Miss Sanford, a niece of James Hamilton of 137 East Thirteenth street, New York, an officer with me in St. Mark's Church, Suddenly he deserts this lady, and a few months afterward is married to Miss Alice E. McElroy off Medway, Mass. They were married in this city by the Rev. Dr. Collyer. The second wife came to me with the facts, and I secured Chase's indictment on the ground of his marriage to Miss McElroy.

"In looking up facts for that tria! I found to my surprise that the divorce from the first McElroy.

"In looking up facts for that trial I found to my surprise that the divorce from the first wife was fraudulent. It had been obtained by Manro Adams, and pretended to be from a court in Cook County, Ili. The laws of that State require personal service of a copy of the complaint on the wife, if she is living outside the State. This was not done, although the affidavit of service said it had been served by a gentleman named Tyrrell, who is a reputable member of the bar in Batavia. Mr. Tyrrell wrote me that he had never heard of the thing before. I found on further investigation that the Judge's signature and the clerk's signature were forgeries, without an attempt to imitate handwriting, and that the seal was a counterfeit, well got up, as was that of Kings county, which he used. My detective found Chase the head of a ladies' seminary in Huntington, Pa. He was decorating a church with evergreens when he was arrested, and was to deliver a Christmas address on the following night. He was brought here, tried, and convicted. In a late number of Frank Leslie's Illustrated his picture appears, minus his great moustache and flowing locks. He is pictured at the blackboart of the convicts in lath school at Sing Sing, of which he is the convict instructor.

"I had paid a visit to Adams's office, then at 181 Broadway, to learn the facts about that divorce. He was securing business then, as he In looking up facts for that trial I found to

"I had paid a visit to Adams's office, then at 181 Broadway, to learn the lacts about that divorce. He was securing business then, as he has been for years, by reaching people through an advertisement in the columns of a prominent New York newspaper. His office was an olegant suite of four roops. He was out when I entered, and a seat was given to me in his room. He seemed to have two or three employees who watched me closely. At least twenty ladies and gontlemen were waiting to see him. A postman came in with his mail, which was placed on his desk. There must have been fifty letters in it. He came in at last a fine-looking, gentlemanly man. He admitted to me that he procured the divores for Chase.

"I don't remember, he replied, but I think it was in California."

"I asked him to look at his register and find out, but he replied that he had not access to his register at that time, but would look in a day or two and let me know. It is unnecessary to say that he never found out.

"After the trial of Chase I proposed on my own account to have Adams expected from the bar. I went before Justices Davis and Brady and asked them to appoint a referee. They examined the matter and promised to do so, but subsequently Justice Davis told me with a twinkle in his eye I had not the ghost of a chance. I was indignant.

"I have had the records searched, he said," and the man is not a lawyer. His punishment must come through the District Attorney's office."

"The lawyer's name signed to the divorce of the collect."

and the man is not a lawyer. His punishment must come through the District Attorney's office.

The lawyer's name signed to the divorce was G. P. Clarke. I had to connect Clarke and Adams to make a case. I employed detectives, but they could not find Clarke. I know, in the right of the recent revelations, that Clarke was probably Adams. probably Adams.

I can only say that the methods and the trickery which have cropt into and lowered the profession of the law, in connection with the generally low tone of society, have satisfied me of one thing. If I had a hundred sons, not one of them should be educated to the law. I have two, and they are physicians."

As soon as they are married he finds out her motive, learns that she does not love him and probably never will, and conducts a scane with her in which Mr. Tearle and Miss Coghlan acted with uncommon effect. The affairs of the wedded pair condemned to maintain the appearances of biss while enduring the most humifating nisery occupy attention for some time, until Lord Amberover reappears with infamous proposals to the wife, and provokes a duel with the hasband. She intercepts, in the old style, the bullet that would have killed her husband, and in the last act he learns that she meant to do so on his account, and that she really loves him.

There are strong situations in the drama, and a pretty little comedy love plot between two children or very young people. It moves with interest and picture-squeness of incident, and it will probably chipy a reasonable run. All the characters are well impersonated, Mr. Tearle doing the best work he has done this senson, and Miss Mensor and Mr. Buckstone making a capital hit as the young lovers. Miss Coghlan is particularly fine as the heroine, and obtained by her performance last evening the warmest applause. A Man who for Thirty-seven Years was Jesse A. Marshall, sentor member of the firm of Marshall & Wilkins, proprietors of the Madison avenue stage line, died at his residence, 18 East Forty-third street, on Tuesday evening. He had not been able to walk since Dec. 27, 1882, when he had a stroke of paralysis while driving in Central Park. He so far recovered as to be able to move about with the help of an attendant, and to take an occasional ride behind his horses, of which he was very fond. On the day he died Mr. Marshall attended a meeting of the directors of the Broadway and Seventh Avenue Surface Car Company, and was as well as usual when he returned home. In the evening he went to hed as usual, and died of paralysis of the heart haf an hour later.

Mr. Marshall was horn in Allen street in 1817, and was a butcher in Washington Market for years. He was 30 years old when, in 1847, he bought a stage into running from Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue down the avenue to Eighth street, to Broadway, and to South Eerry. This business he enlarged afterward.

The funeral will take place from Mr. Marshall's late residence to-morrow at 10½, and the interment will be in Sicepy Hollow Cemetery, near Tarrytown. while driving in Central Park. He so far recov-

RESULATORS OF TROTTING.

Important Meeting of the Turf Congress Matters that Led to Lively De Representative horsemen from Maine to California met in the Congress of the National Trotting Association in Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday. At least 150 subordinate associa-tions were represented by delegates or proxies.

Judge James Grant of Iowa presided. Various amendments to the by-laws, rules, and regulations, having in view further purification of the trotting track, were discussed.

cation of the trotting track, were discussed.

While showing up the evils of permitting conditional entries to be made, Mr. George M. Stearns of Chicopee said that in the East glowing announcements of numerous entries and promise of great sport in all the classes had deceived the people so often that now bicycle races drew a larger attendance than trotting matches. He would as soon see a cat straddle as shingle as a bicycle race. Then the heralding of $10,000 purses, with fourteen or more entries, with only half the horses starting for half the money, was another wrong.

Mr. Burdett Loomis replied to the $10,000 purse shot. He said that Mr. Stearns meant Charter Oak Park. Their $10,000 purse last year more than filled. The amount divided was $11,500. He didn't know how it was at Hampden Park and further east, where Mr. Stearns said they were losing money, but in Hartford they were making more money every year.

Mr. M. T. Gratton of Chicago raised a breeze

Mr. M. T. Gratton of Chicago raised a breezs whon, on bahalf of poor Western associations, as he called them, he moved that in purses for sums of $200 or leas the time made shall not be recorded, and shall be neither a record nor a bar. The storm caused the withdrawal of the proposition.

A very exciting topic arose on a proposition to have the National Trotting Association assume control of a national trotting stud book.

A committee, comprising Major H. C. McDowell, I. J. Powers, Edwin Thorne, Wm. Edwards, Alex. Harbison, L. Brodheau, and G. H. Bailoy, was appointed to work up the matter and report at the next meeting of the Board of Review for the final section of the Board.

The old officers and Board of Review were reselected, but several important changes were made in the District Boards, which are as follows:

The speculation in stocks to-day was tame and largely confined to Union Pacific, the transactions in which aggregated one-fourth of the day's sales. At the opening the tondency was toward lower prices. After the entire list had declined a fraction, prices were stendied, and the market became dull and heavy, and so continued with very narrow fluctuations until half an hour before the close, when all the active stocks were rapidly advanced under the lend of Union Pacific, St. Paul, Northern Pacific preferred, and Oregon and Transcontinental. The last named made a net gain for the day of 2 % cent, and the other three 1 % cent, The rest of the list showed fractional advances.
